1986 Young Americans on Alpenstrasse

Catherine Potter

It was a hot year for Alpenfest, with temperatures soaring into the high 80s and mid-90s for the peak days of the festival.

Michaywe' was the honored industry at the annual Alpenfest Honors Luncheon at Hidden Valley. Paula Blanchard, wife of Governor James Blanchard, was the featured guest.

In a Herald Times interview after the luncheon, Blanchard said one of the things that most impressed her about Alpenfest was the cooperation that went into its organization.

Buergermeister No. 7 was Curtis Toms. In the July 10 edition of the Herald Times, an editorial said much of Toms' volunteer work was in "low visibility" roles that nonetheless have involved significant contributions. Toms had done much hospital and court volunteering.

The 22nd annual Alpenfest

The 22nd annual Alpenfest queen was Cathy Potter, daughter of James Potter and Charlene Clark. The first runner-up was Jill Slominski.

Traci Lynn Pickering was the overall winner of the ankle contest, and Duane Snook took home the overall honors for the men in the knee contest.

The Young Americans, a group of young college students from across the country, entertained on the Alpenstrasse.
