

Geo F. Qua, Clothier, Gent's Furnisher and Shoe Dealer

Geo F. Qua began business in Gaylord with lots of faith and very little money; today he has a snug sum of money, some good town property and much more faith than at the beginning. His first business venture was in company with his brother Reuben Qua, when they bought out a stock on West Main street in the building just vacated by J.M. Brodie. Nine years ago he decided to go it alone, and had been going it successfully ever since. For six years he has occupied the present commodious store in the Opera House block, and during the present season has made many improvements, added new fixtures and now has one of the finest store rooms in town. His leading lines are clothing and shoes, with a complete line of gents' furnishings, hats, etc. Mr. Qua's plan has been that a satisfied customer is the best kind of advertisement and has always strived to give satisfaction in both quality and price. His business has grown in a satisfactory way until he is now rated one of the solid business men of Gaylord. Mr. Qua is a firm believer in fraternalism. He is a charter member and enthusiastic worker in the local K.P. organization, having filled all the chairs in that order. He is also a F. & A. M. and a Royal Arch Mason. During Frank Buell's administration he was under sheriff for two terms, and in 1902-3 he served his township as supervisor. In short he is a representative citizen, ever willing to join hands with other citizens in things pertaining to the mutual welfare and growth of the community. Personally he is of a jovial nature and his cordially and pleasing manner has won him a multitude of friends.
